ANNEXATION WORKSHOP For Lake Mohave Ranchos Fire District Thursday, September 25 10:00 am to 12 noon at the Barn Event Center in Meadview

Theodora Koeppen, Board Chair for LMRFD will explain the annexation process with discussion about the pros and cons of joining the fire district.

Items to be covered are:

- How to know if your property is in the LMRFD?
- How to request to join the LMRFD?
- How to calculate your fire district tax?
- What is the Fire District Assistance Tax?
- Why join the Fire District?

The benefits of joining the fire district will be discussed in depth. The annexation process is complex, however the LMRFD board and personnel will walk you through the steps from the application to approval. They will be ready to answer any questions you may have about annexation.

The Community of Meadview benefits from fire district tax dollars in many ways. The fire station building is maintained with upgrades and repairs done on a regular basis as funding will allow. Fire apparatus and the ambulance is maintained and upgraded regularly. Communication is provided via an up-to-date system with a direct 911 connection to Kingman Dispatch. The Fire District operates with functional management of qualified personnel including a fire chief who supports and encourages volunteers with training and educational resources. Employment opportunities are available for qualified individuals. The fire station in Meadview averages 17-22 days of service with one person on duty. Although this is not enough, it is more than the current tax base supports. Property annexations into the district will add to the current tax base and provide the funding necessary to add more service days at Station 43 in Meadview.

Please be sure to attend the Annexation Workshop to understand how specific properties can be annexed into the Lake Mohave Ranchos Fire District.

ANTHONY'S SPORTS CORNER

The Arizona Cardinals lost a close one against the San Francisco 49ers. They lost in the last second of the game by a field goal. The final score was 16-15. That makes our record 2-1. In Week 4 on September 25, the Arizona Cardinals will play at home on Thursday Night Football against the Seattle Seahawks. Hopefully, that game will be as good as the last one.

The MLB regular season is almost over. The playoffs start September 30. The LA Dodgers, Philadelphia Phillies, Milwaukee Brewers, Chicago Cubs, Toronto Blue Jays and the San Diego Padres have made the playoffs. It doesn't look like the Atlanta Braves and the Arizona Diamondbacks will play in the playoffs this year. Watch out for the Chicago Cubs this year in the playoffs, as they have been playing some good ball.

The Indiana Fever made the semifinals of the WNBA playing against the Las Vegas Aces. The Phoenix Mercury also made the semifinals playing against the Minnesota Lynx. The winner of these games will be playing each other for the WNBA finals.

NASCAR is in the middle of the Cup Series playoffs. On September 28, they will be in Kansas at the Kansas Speedway. Then on October 5, they will race in Charlotte, North Carolina at the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

If you want to watch some good football, always watch college football. Going into this weekend, Georgia is ranked #5, LSU is coming in at #4, Penn State is #3, Miami is #2 and the #1 team right now is Ohio State.

As always, you can watch your favorite sporting events at Anthony's Fisherman's Landing Bar. Until the next issue, keep watching sports, my friends.

Good day Meadview. This month a fellow Arizonan and book author Kevin Fedarko won the prestigious 2025 Andrew Carnegie Medal for excellence in the non-fiction category for his book A Walk in the Park. In his acceptance speech he mentioned our small town of Meadview and the local Mohave County library. A few months ago while working in the library I met a local Red Cross sponsor, Denny Preisser. I told him how we had a book in our new book section that our locals love. To my amazement, Denny told me he knows the author. Upon winning this award, Kevin Fedarko not only mentioned Meadview in his speech, but he also donated several signed copies of his book to be added to the Mohave County library's collection. We are honored to have been mentioned on a national stage and grateful for the gifts. What an unexpected experience.

The library also offers printing, internet, and faxing services.
The library is open Tuesday-Thursday-Saturday 10am-3pm.

GEOLOGIST AT LARGE- The Lesson of the Headframe

By Luis Vega

I always wanted to be the first to see an outcrop in the hope that it would lead me to the discovery of a new mineral deposit. I thought that by going out the farthest into the most rugged terrain, it would give me the chance to be like the early prospectors and find something no one had recognized as a valuable mineral deposit. This way of working led me to a life of adventure in remote and challenging environments. Now in my sunset years, the adventure still draws me, but the body doesn't want to climb that mountain or chop through that jungle. I have gained a new perspective and I'm listening to the advice of many explorationists.

New rule number one: the best place to find mineral deposits is within sight of a headframe- that wood or metal structure above a mine shaft. This adage points out that many times ore deposits occur in clusters. The area where a deposit has been found is a good place to look for another one.

There are so many examples of new deposits being found near old ones that the list could fill a book, so I'll just point one out that strikes close to home. As a cub geologist working in north-central Nevada, I took a drive to the old, abandoned Getchel mine. I looked around, studied the rocks and collected specimens of the minerals realgar and orpiment. I felt very smart knowing that the minerals that I'd collected were indicator minerals for a gold deposit, but because the Getchel mine had been mined out in the 1930s, decided to look elsewhere for a new discovery. As the years went by, many geologists visited the Getchel mine. It was even one of the best places to take geology students to see Carlin-type gold deposit alteration and indicator minerals.

After working for some years, I returned to complete a master's degree and during the oral exam, the professor asked me to describe a rock specimen he'd kept hidden under the table until near the end of the exam. I completely amazed him by describing the rock, its alteration and indicator minerals. What really floored him was when I told him where it was from- the Getchel mine.

I was very proud of myself after passing my exams but twenty years later, I learned I wasn't as smart as I thought. A company doing exploration drilling a short distance from Getchel discovered a huge gold deposit that was completely buried by alluvium. I believe they have over 20 million ounces of gold reserves. All that gold, overlooked for years, was within view of a headframe.

Two other terms used by geologists to describe where they look for new deposits are "brown fields" and "green fields." Brown fields are areas that've been looked over by many companies and geologists but might deserve another look because of new theories or ideas. A new conceptual model could indicate where to drill or what commodity to look for. The Black Mountains of Mohave County would be called a brown field area because they've been explored for over 100 years but there are still new ideas and concepts to test. The old Arabian mine off Highway 68, is an example where new drilling is having positive results.

Green fields are new areas that've never been explored. Not many green fields left in the US. When I was working in South America, it was all green fields. There were no old drill roads or roads to old mines so access to an exploration target was by muleback or helicopter. There were outcrops that'd never felt the strike of a geology pick. I was in hog heaven, we even found new deposits which was the "icing on the cake" and made it all worthwhile. I felt like an early explorer. Although I didn't have to worry about certain dangers, there were times in Peru when the guerrillas of Sendero Luminoso (Shining Path) were in the neighborhood, so we had to take precautions.

Headframe of the New Moon Mine, Mineral Park, Mohave County, AZ

Today, I do my exploration work within view of a headframe, in other words, where other deposits have been found. I study the geology, structure and alteration to try and identify new ideas. I also read geology journals to keep abreast of new concepts and theories. I learned my lesson from the oral exams. Sometimes I think there is so much to learn, I don't know what I don't know.
